DRAW YOUR OWN COMIC: ROAD TRIP

The invention of the car greatly changed how tourists visited New Hampshire. People could travel around more easily than they could by train, and they could go to parts of New Hampshire they had never been to before. In towns all over the state, Granite Staters built businesses for these new tourists, like motels, restaurants, and campgrounds.

Imagine you are on a road trip to a place in New Hampshire you have never been to before, and draw a comic strip about what you experience. What are you going to see? Who are you traveling with? Will you be spending the night somewhere? What will you eat along the way?
