

NAME: _____

GOING TO SCHOOL

Education has always been important to the people of New Hampshire. But what students learned about and how often they went to school was different in every town. In the early 1800s, though, the state government decided to change that. New laws were created to give all students the same experience.

Using the Venn diagram below, list the similarities and differences between going to school in the early 19th century and your experience in school today. What subjects were taught? When were students going to school? Who would you be attending school with?
