Bills of Rights Scenario Sort Game

Olivia writes an article criticizing the budget approved by the school board and posts it on social media.	Congress passes a law that only the army can own weapons of all kinds.	During a hurricane, soldiers are told to stay in private homes until the storm passes and they can continue evacuation and rescue efforts.
Emma is accused of theft and waits five years for her trial.	Police search the bag of someone on the street just because they don't like how small it is.	Liam is tried for a crime he was already found not to be guilty of because new evidence has come to light.
Noah and Ethan disagree about the property line between their backyards and take the case to court instead of settling it between themselves.	Sophia, age 10, is caught stealing candy and sentenced to 20 years in prison.	A local law bans people from walking their dogs at night; residents argue it violates their freedoms.
The federal government passes a law about what time school should start. State governments say its their decision, not the federal government's.	Lucas's boss demands to see what messages are in his personal email. Lucas says he has a right to privacy even though it is not listed in the Constitution and HR agrees.	Ava is given a fair punishment for the crime she is convicted of.
A judge refuses to allow a jury trial in a civil case involving $2,000.	New Hampshire creates its own driver's license rules separate from federal law.	Officers get a search warrant signed by a judge before entering a suspect's house. Once inside, they only look in the person's office, since that is what is detailed in the warrant.
Witnesses are called to testify both for and against the accused during a criminal trial.	Alexander refuses to testify in court because he would incriminate himself.	A citizen legally buys a hunting rifle after passing a background check and taking a class on how to safely use it.
Mia refuses to let soldiers stay in her home.	A city passes a law saying people can't hold protests in the park.	A group gathers signatures to change a local rule about curfew.
